Sentences Of Stories On Here That Don't Make Since.

32 2 3

Chapter 1 by Cat4055

In this story, we will be going through stories with a fine-tooth comb. Don't do grammar or punctuation mistakes, you'll see what I mean.

1. Dreadwing. The first sentence of the first chapter. "The poisoned crossbow dart zips past my ear." How does a crossbow fire a dart? They fire bolts. Sure, maybe if you fitted the dart to work... but why would you even do that? Just... why!? It would be so much easier to use a dart-gun, or just a bolt altogether. Also, the poisoned thing. Would you use a pressure sensitive vile or what? I think you would just dip the part that will penetrate the skin in poison.

Your turn.

Chapter 2 by FangirlBasics

2. The Million Dollar Bottle Of Hair Dye: FIRST SENTENCE.

"Let's start the bidding at fifty thousand."

WHAT?! WHO STARTS A BIDDING AT FIFTY THOUSAND?! Let me guess, half the people left.

MODEL "Every hand heaped in the air."

Hang on, I have to "sin" this sentence. Aha! I see the problem. It was metaphorical, but they have so many mistakes in this story I have to write this.
